At the moment of the birth of the world, a great sea of mist covered the earth, and gradually disappeared as the earth dried. But as the world was born and advanced, the mists slowly returned, turning the world into an endless winter that barely leaves any evidence of the living world. And the change came to a point where the distant nation of Delquiiis was controlled by a civilization brought by virtue of frigid winds. The people of Delquiiis that lack any power of magic were scattered and their civilization has been destroyed, leaving only ruins. Although the world was slowly returning to an ice age, the continent of Sinshe was not the same as the other continent of Zilynos. Since Delquiiis was a continent controlled by the magic power of the west, the magic of the continent of Sinshe became drained, and the continent became infertile without magic. The people of the continent of Sinshe that lacked any power of magic lived in poverty, but they were also able to live a very comfortable life. While the continent of Sinshe followed the path of an advanced civilization, the continent of Zilynos lived a military culture and became a country of powerful, militaristic people. The continent of Zilynos had vast plains and the unique feature of its inhabitants was their swordsmanship. The people of Zilynos that could not become a soldier in wars led a miserable life, but they could also live a comfortable life thanks to the power of blood that flowed through them. With the passage of time, the continent of Sinshe that lacked any power of magic became increasingly colder as the amount of iron rain consumed the earth, making the temperature drop to the point where the world was frozen solid. The people of the continent of Sinshe began

Our Story Designed for users in the West, where the symbol of unity stands for a reason. The Lands Between is a land where Azeroth, the homeland of the gnomes, and the fifth continent, Zuldazar, the homeland of the naga, have settled down in peace. In the emptiness, people's minds have drifted as distant as the sky and the sea. Only the gnomes, a semi-human Q: How to persist an ArrayList on server to client? I am making a small game on Android. I am using a thread which sends message to the server. Now, I would like to save the ArrayList received through socket. The ArrayList is used for storing the users inputs to the game. Can anyone help me with this? I think the client code is simple, but not the server.

A: You could save the array by serialising it into a file on the device. A: You can also use a JSONArray if your server supports it.

Q: Does `f.redirect_to` redirect after "echo" aka "render"? I'm learning Ruby on Rails and is creating a guide user can follow. I'm a little confused about what happens when a user "echo"s (render) or clicks on a link (`redirect_to`) "echoed" content. So: is the output from the content "echoed" the same as if it was a normal page load? If so, where is the output stored? And if it is the same, can I remove the actions part? If so, would my action still be maintained? A: If we have an HTML page with the following content:

{% if 1 %}

1

{% else %}

{% end %}

when called like so: Rails adds the following HTML to the output:

and then redirects the user to a new location: In Ruby on rails, the Rails generator is not run on each and every request but it
